

Welcome To Forbes.com Attaché

Home Movies

© Olivia Decker

The Da Vinci Code Villette, France

Though the lavish 17th-century chateau's first brush with Da Vinci Code fame came when Dan Brown's best-selling novel hit bookstores, the fanfare multiplied when the story--and the chateau, which played the home to English historian Sir Leigh Teabing--hit the silver screen earlier this year. And few enjoyed the success more than the chateau's owner, Olivia Decker, who opened up her home to the cast and crew for nine days. To keep quiet on the set, she remembers having to hang up the phone on several important calls. "Some clients thought I was joking when I'd say, 'Sorry, I have to hang up now. Tom Hanks and Ian McKellen just started talking here.'"

For more information, please contact Olivia Hsu Decker, co-founder of Decker Bullock Real Estate Services and the chateau's current owner:

Olivia Hsu Decker, Decker Bullock 415.435.1600 Phone ~ 415.383.1258 Fax homes@sanfranciscofinehomes.com www.sanfranciscofinehomes.com www.frenchvacation.com